This image shows a vertical strip of a document, likely a book or a bound manuscript. The left side of the strip is dominated by a dark, heavily textured vertical band, which appears to be the binding or gutter of the book. This band has a rough, fibrous, and somewhat irregular appearance. To the right of this dark band is a lighter, more uniform vertical strip. This lighter area has a slightly grainy texture and appears to be a page from the document, though any text or markings on it are not legible due to the high contrast and resolution of the scan. The overall image is oriented vertically, with the binding on the left and the page on the right.

This image shows a vertical strip of a document page. On the left side, there is a dark, textured binding or edge. The main part of the strip is a light-colored page. Faint, illegible text is visible across the page. Near the top, there is a small, dark, irregular mark or smudge. The overall appearance is that of a scanned document edge.
